Adverb of manner worksheet with answers

Your content index can do this quiz online or print it on paper. This tests some of the words in our Vocabulary section's adverb list. Contributor: Matt Errey creator of Word Up Adverbs of Manner List Adverbs of Place List Adverbs of manner describes how something happened. For example, it is possible to walk or run at different speeds. The words used to describe walking or running at different speeds (fast or slow for example) are examples of adverbs in an excellent way. They help readers gain greater insight into how written scenes are played out. Comparing the following sentences will help you understand how these adverb words change the overall meaning of the sentences they find. The kids are running. (There are no adverbs of manner in this sentence, so we can only imagine how fast the boys are running.) The kids are running fast. (The adverb is quick. It tells us that boys are in a hurry.) The kids are tired, so they're running slower than ever. (Adverbs of manner slowly. It tells us that children run, but they don't cover the ground as much as before.) There are a few rules to keep in mind about adverbs: When using these adverb words, be careful not to place them between objects and verbs. They often fit best after the main sentence or verb object. If there is a preposition before the object, the adverb may be placed either before the preposition or after the sentence object. Add emphasis by placing the adverb way before verbs and objects, and when these adverb words are placed at the beginning of the sentence, they catch the reader's attention. As you read examples of adverbs in the following ways, you'll see how the same adverbs can lend different meanings to sentences that contain almost exactly the same set of words.
